(NYC Dept of Consumer Affairs on Oct 3 recommends major changes in rules governing sales at auction galleries which would open up to bidders some information now held secret. Proposed changes would require auctioneers to make clear in ad, catalogues and announcements at sales whether they own goods being auctioned and also identify any article carrying minimum selling price, or reserve, and its dollar amount.

Galleries opposing requirement that reserve prices be made public have maintained that it is necessary to allow such reserves to be kept secret to protect sellers against effects on auctions of bad weather, boycotts and collusive bidding by rings that try to hold auction prices down. Critics contend that bidders are baffled by reserve-price system.
